The Baccarat Jury Decides for the Defendants

LORD COLERIDGE'S ABLE CHARGE

An Eloquent Summing of the Evidence—Sir Owen Williams Makes a Scene in Court—The Jury Was Out Only Fifteen Minutes.

... I ask your Lordship ... Sir Edward ... thought proper ... Sir Edward Clarke ... I ask your Lordship to interfere ... that General Williams should not be allowed to make a statement ... privilege of doing so ... Williams hotly replied ... tones of huskiness ... under the influence of the anger ... abominable charge. Here the lord chief justice interfered by saying: "I don't remember the expression but I do not think that ... can be allowed to speak." But General Williams persisted in being heard, remarking angrily: "We are a vessel of sacrificing ... innocent man." This statement was ... without any evidence being brought forward for its justification.

Lord Coleridge again interrupted the general, remarking with considerable warmth: "I cannot hear any statement from you," and immediately ... summing up, while General Williams retired frowning and greatly discontented to his seat, where he received the ... of the friends who had come with him to court in order to hear him defend himself from the allegations made yesterday by the solicitor general in the latter's summing up for the plaintiff. The lord chief justice at the opening of his speech explained to the jury at length the case of an action for slander as this one is and an action for libel. His lordship added that if the jury found that the defendants had spoken the truth their verdict should be for the defendants, but if the jury thought ... that the charges ... made were not true and that Sir William Gordon Cumming did not do anything wrong in playing baccarat at Tranby Croft in September last, then the verdict must be for the plaintiff.

Lord Coleridge then entreated the jury to keep their minds steadily on the evidence and on the evidence only. Continuing, the lord chief justice analyzed at length the testimony of the plaintiff, which evidence, he said, was well worth consideration. The plaintiff, he added, had his counters on a pile of white paper, and would have been less liable to be detected if he had as the others did put their counters on the cloth of the table. During another portion of his summing up Lord Coleridge said that the Prince of Wales' presence at Tranby Croft was sufficient to ... Mr. Lovett Green's objection to creating a disturbance in the baccarat room or elsewhere, by calling attention to the actions which he objected to on the part of Sir William Gordon Cumming.

"Sir Edward Clarke," said Lord Coleridge, "had said that the eye saw what the eye expected to see, and undoubtedly if persons had their minds set on certain things, less proof was sufficient to satisfy than would be otherwise needed, but the question was to whether in this case the observation referred would apply.

Sir Edward Clarke, the lord chief justice continued, "had commented upon Mr. Berkeley Levett's exclamation, 'Good God, Sir William Gordon Cumming caught cheating,' but suppose that the remark had been ... and heard ... the ... bishop of Nova Scotia, a prelate of the order of the ... selling a living." (Laughter.) There would be nothing unlikely to such an exclamation."

Lord Coleridge also called the attention of the jury to one particular observation which was made on behalf of the plaintiff ... the counsel of the ... it was to the effect that there was more in the case than appeared on the surface." Against this, the lord chief justice remarked: "I most emphatically protest. The jury has nothing to do with things which are not on the surface. You have to confine yourself to the single issue and what you have heard and what has been proved during the trial."

When Lord Coleridge had proceeded thus far with his charge to the jury the hour of ... had arrived and the court as usual promptly adjourned for luncheon. After ... the lord chief justice resumed his summing up. While admitting the improbability of a man of Sir William Gordon Cumming's position and wealth lowering himself to cheat and to cheat his friend the Prince of Wales too, Lord Coleridge made a strong ... against the plaintiff in calling the ... attention to his failure to face his accusers.

Lord Coleridge then said: "We have now ... a very important point in my ... I ... can fully ... to find, any contradiction of the ... that Sir William Gordon Cumming was informed of Mr. Lycett Green's ... to be confronted with him. If I am ..." added the lord chief justice, turning to Sir Edward Clarke, "I desire to be ..." Sir Edward, for the plaintiff, ... his feet and said that there was no ... that Sir William Gordon Cumming ... informed of Mr. Lycett Green's ... confronted with him, the plaintiff, ... Sir Charles Russell for the defense promptly drew and read from ... Williams' testimony that the latter ... court that he had informed Sir Gordon Cumming of Mr. Lycett ... to be confronted with him ... when both Sir Charles Russell and Clarke had said all they ... say on the above point dwelt at ... his remarks not being in ... the plaintiff.

... the few minutes that the jury was ... the plaintiff sat quietly in his seat ... big letters, in the ... much interested ... law, Lord Middleton, and ... who sat near Sir William Gordon ... very nervous and ... by their actions and continued whisperings. The five defendants also nervous and chatting in ... with their friends, evidently being ... to hear the result and to get ... the scene after their seven days of ...

... Wilson and Mrs. Lycett Green ... turn pale ... the verdict was ... and were ... faint ... when they heard the hisses which greeted them. The ... remained for several minutes whispering earnestly with their counsels and then ... by their respective husbands passed slowly out of the court with bowed heads, not ... speaking to them and to all appearances the ... hisses. In fact so fright ... and the ... was the bearing of the defendants unless Mr. Berkeley Levett be excepted that anybody would have taken them for people who had just had a ... withering verdict ...

The Wilsons with ... spread from the court room to the crowd outside and from there all over London and it was again made evident as the defendants drove away by the chilling manner in which they were regarded that popular sympathy was with the guest of Tranby Croft, whose future was now as black looking as that of a man condemned to a long term of imprisonment for some heinous crime.

In the meanwhile, how different was the greeting extended to the defeated litigant Sir William Gordon Cumming. The latter all the time while the defendants were, with ... hearts, leaving the court room had remained calmly seated in his usual place. When the Wilsons had disappeared, the baronet stood up and gratefully smiling, shook hands with Sir Edward Clarke and with others who pressed around him with many cheering words of sympathy for the man whose career was thus blighted beyond all hope. The soldierly form of Sir William, instead of shrinking beneath the blow which had been dealt him, seemed to be proudly drawn up to its full height as he walked slowly but steadily to a little table near by, donned his overcoat, carefully placed his hat on his head, and accompanied by Lord Middleton walked out of the court by one of the private exits, followed by the pitying glances of the ladies who still remained in the galleries anxious to have the last glimpse of the victim of Tranby Croft baccarat playing.

As the still proud looking baronet and Lord Middleton left the law courts, there was an evident difference in the manner in which the general public looked upon the victorious defendants and the defeated plaintiff. Sir William and Lord Middleton were no sooner recognized as they entered the latter's carriage than they were loudly, repeatedly and enthusiastically cheered by the excited and dense throng packing every approach to the new law courts. This reception contrasted vividly and most significantly with the totally different manner—dead silence—with which the Wilsons were greeted as they drove away.

The effect of the verdict on military circles, it is generally understood, is that Sir William, major and lieutenant colonel of the Scots fusilier guards, will be promptly cashiered out of the army, and just as quickly expelled from the Marlborough club, the Guards club, the Turf club and any other ... to which he may ...

The summing up of the lord chief justice during the afternoon was undoubtedly more strongly against Sir William Gordon Cumming than were the chief justice's remarks made during the morning. The afternoon utterances of Lord Coleridge may be said to have amounted practically to instructions to find the verdict against the plaintiff.

One of the baccarat jurymen who was interviewed after the court had adjourned said there was no doubt from the first moment the jury retired as to how the verdict would go. Each of the jurymen he said was asked so soon as they were alone, whether he was for the plaintiff or the defendants, and each reply was given without hesitation ... for the defendants. One juryman the gentleman who was interviewed added frankly admitted that he sympathized with the plaintiff but he was so struck with the unanimity of opinion which prevailed in favor of the defendants that although he would like to have found for the plaintiff he said he could not conscientiously do so in the face of the evidence which had been presented on behalf of the defense. The interviewed juryman said in conclusion that it appeared to him that the jury had made up their minds as to the verdicts they would render before the chief justice summed up and made his charge.

A group of friends still adhering to Sir William Cumming met at the Turf club in expectation of seeing him. Since the scandal became public Cumming has not been seen at the Marlborough or Guards clubs, but has occasionally visited the Turf circle. Tonight the members of the Turf club were undecided how to act. Personally Cumming is liked at the club. He has an honorable record throughout in all his dealing with members of the club and many are adverse to his expulsion. The division of public feeling from the verdict will largely act as a division the aristocratic circle ... with the ... and approvers. Lord Coleridge's charge while the mass of the public sympathize with Cumming and accuse the judge of gross partiality.

The hisses with which the galleries of the court saluted the verdict was repeated outside by an excited crowd thronging the corridors. The defendants on leaving the court were surrounded by a mob and murmurs of insulting allusions were hurled to them until they reached the protection of ... Mr. L... this residence had to fly ... safety to the adjacent chancery court where he escaped by climbing over a bench.

PRESS OPINIONS.

LONDON, June 10.—Commenting upon the Cumming trial, The Post says it has no desire to add anguish to the ... ending of a brilliant career but the fact remains that the document ... for ... inent counsel, however ... to ... the honor that Cumming himself treated so lightly.

The News says it was really an affair of the diamond necklace, the accusation being of secondary place to its surroundings. "In our opinion no other verdict was possible. MORRIS PARK, N. Y., June 9.—The meeting was continued here today under most favorable circumstances. The weather was perfect for racing. The track while not fast, was in splendid shape, and the programme was a good one. No Shipbuilding on the Lakes.

"I have no idea how long the yard will remain shut down," Manager W. J. Babcock said, "but with the present outlook for ship building it will be for some time. Minister Romero Will Leave.

NEW ORLEANS, June 9.—President Diaz has telegraphed to Senor Matias Romero, Mexican minister at Washington, to come immediately to Mexico and assume the secretaryship of the treasury as successor to Senor Dublan. Senor Romero in view of important matters now under negotiation between the governments may not come in which case Sebastian Camacho, vice-president of the Mexican Central railroad will be appointed secretary of the treasury.

MINISTER ROMERO EXPLAINS.

Minister Romero said this morning that the dispatch from Mexico published in New Orleans stating that President Diaz had directed him to come to Mexico and assume the secretaryship of the treasury had its origin in a publication made in a Mexican paper May 30 to that effect and so far as he knew was without foundation. The minister further said he had no reason to believe he would be called upon to assume the treasury portfolio, as he had received no such notice from his government.

Late Hawaiian News.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—The steamer Australia from Honolulu brings news that the grip is epidemic in the islands, and that in the leper settlement nine-tenths of the lepers are down with it. Water is very scarce in the country, and when the Australia left the reservoirs were nearly empty. If no rain has fallen since, a water famine must now prevail.

A few hours before the Australia sailed the government kerosene warehouse took fire, and smoke could be seen issuing from the burning structure when the steamer was sixty miles at sea. The loss is estimated at over $40,000.

Argentine News.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—In 1870 the Argentine Republic passed a law permitting the national government to pay a reward of $20,000 for the discovery of a paying coal field. Though many efforts have been made to earn this prize, none have approached success until recently. It is now asserted that a coal bed meeting the requirements has been discovered, but further boring operations are necessary to fully verify the statement. All the coal used in the republic has to be imported. The imports in 1890 amounted to 658,000 tons.

As the result of over speculation it is estimated that Argentine securities have shrunk in value $... below the highest point reached in 1889, taking no account of ... decline in cedulas. Australia is In It.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—From private advices received at the postoffice department from the Fourth quinquennial Universal Postal Union congress, now holding sessions at Vienna, it is learned that the long-desired accession of the Australian colonies has been received. This means a reduction of more than 66 per cent. in the postage to those countries, the postal union rate being only five cents per half ounce for letters and two cents for postal cards. This important reform is largely due to the efforts of the United States delegates. Many important results are expected in addition to those already accomplished by this international body.

A Friend of Blaine.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 6.—Gen. Russell A. Alger, of Michigan, arrived here yesterday. In an interview he said: "If Mr. Blaine indicates to the Republican party that he will be a candidate for president, I believe he will be nominated and in a moment I believe he will be the strongest man in the Republican party."

The Immigration Issue.

Review of Reviews.

Another advantage that this country is likely to reap from the Rudini correspondence following the New Orleans outbreak is a general willingness to treat more firmly and sensibly the immigration question, and also an apparent disposition to face anew the question of naturalization. Since the Mafia massacre there has been in the Pennsylvania coke district a collision between hundreds of striking Hungarians and the local militia, several Hungarians having been shot. Thus far the Austro-Hungarian government has not seen fit to make any imperious demands upon the ... at Washington, but the American people will soon begin to make very great demands for a restriction or a careful sifting of immigration. They are beginning to look at the matter from a scientific-statistical point of view. Why should they consent to spoil their breed of pedigree-stock by allowing the introduction of the refuse of the murder-breeds of southern Europe? In Egypt, one person in every 12,000 is assassinated every year. In Italy the proportion is nearly as high, being 8.06 to every 100,000 inhabitants. The proportion of England, Whitechapel notwithstanding, is 0.40. Why should the English-speaking Republic allow the unlimited introduction of this murder-strain into the blood of its citizens? At present, the tide is unchecked. On March 17th, a terrible catastrophe in Gibraltar Bay further reminded us of the flood of Italian immigration that is pouring into the United States. A British steamer Utopia—what irony there is in the title!—with 880 Italian passengers on board, attempted to anchor in the bay as the southwester was blowing hard, and a tremendous sea swept her decks. The current and the wind drove her broadside-down upon the ram of the ironclad Anson. The great iron beak tore open the steamer's side, and in five minutes the vessel, with all her crowd of Italians, sank down in the sight of the English fleet. Everything was done that human valor could do to save the human freight of the doomed Utopia, but more than 400 perished. The survivors have now ... with ... New York.

FOR SALE.

1. The magnificent business property southwest corner Pike's Peak and Nevada avenues, in the exact heart of the city, being at the point where the original four wards come together. This property has a frontage of over 150 feet on Nevada avenue and 100 feet on Pike's Peak avenue, and has 11 feet on the alley by the city clerk's office. Inside of two years this corner will be as good as the corner of Pike's Peak and Tejon streets for business purposes, if not better, for it fronts on two 100 feet avenues and being more centrally located you grounds the situation and I will sell it for one third the price that will buy the other. Meanwhile, the improvements on it pay the taxes and leave a handsome surplus.

2. The equally splendid residence property on North Tejon street, fronting 400 feet on the Rapid Transit line running from Willamette avenue to Monument street, with a depth of 190 feet to a 20 feet alley in a most desirable neighborhood. One half the frontage on Tejon street and the 190 ft. frontage on Willamette avenue is bordered with ten year old maple and locust trees. I will sell this grand property if taken at once, for $15,000. Compare this with the corner ... fourth the size in Shook's Run bottom, which the school board was so glad to get for $8800, and you will see this very cheap.

3. I have a large block of desirable property, consisting of lots improved and unimproved, which while a good deal of money is required to handle it, I will sell for just one-half its real worth at market prices. The improvements yield a very fair return over and above the taxes, and within two years the property should be sold at a profit of at least 100 per cent. for anyone who will invest in it now. This is really a big thing, and I will be glad to show it to anyone who means "business." None others need apply.

4. A choice business corner on Huerfano street, 75 by 190 feet. A first class location for a warehouse, a grain and feed store, or a large blacksmithing establishment, which will catch all the trade entering town from the west. Or it would be just the corner for a forwarding and commission house, a coal and lumber and wood yard, or a stone and marble yard, large enough to show and keep stock properly, and convenient for shipping via several lines of railroad. This is a great property for someone who has the means with which to buy it, and the business requiring such a location.

R. W. STEELE,
Manager of the Gazette.

We print this morning the opinions of to-day's London papers on the baccarat case. The wonders of the telegraph are striking even if familiar.

Whoever may have been the author of the explosions which startled the residents near the college reservation the other evening, they should be promptly punished. It is probable that the only object in the deed was fun, but fun of this kind should be suppressed by law. There are too many invalids in this city and people who need their quiet rest for night birds to play such tricks unheeded.

The verdict in the baccarat trial is unsatisfactory because it is difficult to tell what it really means. The weight of the evidence was surely against Sir William Cumming, but after what had been said about the influence of royalty and the honor or dishonor for the prince, the jurymen might well have been pardoned for wondering whether the witnesses for the defense were not following the illustrious example of Albert Edward, and "perjuring themselves like an English gentleman." And thus wondering the jurymen might have felt that devotion to their prince could only lead to a verdict against his accuser. But admitting that the witnesses for the defense spoke the truth and that the jurymen were honest, the verdict is still unsatisfactory. Lord Coleridge was right in telling the jury that they had no concern with what was beneath the surface, and that it must not influence their verdict. But for this the public has concern. It was not the question of whether an English nobleman cheated at cards that has interested civilized men all over the world. The true defendant was he who sat beside the judge, the Prince of Wales. So far as he is concerned, the verdict in this case is by no means one of acquittal, and while he has been spared a verdict against his evidence, the trial has resulted in throwing an unpleasant light upon his character, and has lessened the esteem in which he is held by the public.

THE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement exercises of Colorado college, which begins with the baccalaureate sermon by President Slocum Sunday evening, June 14th, and concludes with the address by Mr. Baker and the president's reception on Wednesday, mark an important event in the history of this institution.

During the past three years changes in the affairs of the college have been taking place, which only those most closely connected with its management can fully appreciate.

The readers of the Gazette are already familiar with the improvement in its financial condition. Its property has been freed from debt, new and substantial buildings have been erected, $190,000 has been added to its endowment and confidence has been established in its future permanency. While it still is in great need of material assistance, as its present income cannot possibly meet its necessary expenses, yet its condition to-day is a vast improvement over the days when its friends began to ask whether it was not wise to close its doors.

But great as has been the change in its business affairs, the transition which has been quietly taking place in its internal condition has been much greater. To raise the standard of an institution of higher learning is an exceedingly difficult matter, and requires great patience and the necessity of making the highest good of the institution superior to the demands of any individual. It requires also a large outlook into the future and often the development of a policy which only those who have this larger view can fully appreciate. Next week Colorado college will graduate a senior class, and confer the degree of Bachelor of Arts upon students who have taken courses of study and passed examinations which correspond with those taken in the older institutions of the country.

This senior class is not a large one and it could not be expected that it would be, but the young men composing it have the ability and the training that will enable them to fill important places in society.

It is certainly a source of congratulation that the college is now not only sustaining the academy courses, but is doing the full work of the four college years. The junior class is much larger than the senior, so there is promise of a good graduating class next year.

Much remains yet to be done for Colorado college, and no one realizes this more than those who are bearing its burdens; but there is every reason why all friends of education should generously and warmly support it in word and deed.

New York Money Market.

New York, June 5.—Money closed at 3 per cent; the highest rate, the lowest was 2½. [illegible] closed steady; posted rates 4.85 @ 4.88; actual rates 4.83¾ @ 4.84 for 60 days and 4.87¼ @ 4.87½ for demand. London still influences the stock market here and the early London were irregularly lower, as they continued to be very free selling for foreign account after the market opened here the majority of stocks declined ¼ to ⅝ per cent. in the first hour from yesterday's figures. The reason for the London selling was said to be the withdrawal of gold from London to Russia. Private cables to some bankers here were confirmatory of this and they also stated that the Bank of England was amply prepared for any such movement of funds. Nevertheless it afforded an opportunity to the bears to make a turn in the market. The announcement also by 11 o'clock that $500,000 gold had been engaged for export to-morrow helped to weaken the stock market and at 1 o'clock prices had scored a further fractional decline.

Future of Terra del Fuego.

The notions of Terra del Fuego which prevailed ten years ago have been completely upset by recent explorations. The latest travelers there are Messrs. Rousson and Willems, who have returned to France from their scientific mission in Terra del Fuego. These explorers believe the northern part of the island can be turned to good account, and that the day is not far distant when large herds and flocks will be raised upon ranches established all along the river valleys. A large district north of the Straits of Magellan, in Patagonia, which was wholly unoccupied twelve years ago, is now full of little farms devoted to raising sheep and cattle.

The owners have prospered so well that the territory they occupy has become too crowded. It is impossible to extend this business further north, and the farmers will therefore be compelled to turn to Terra del Fuego, which will receive the overflow from Patagonia. On Dawson Island, near the northwest coast of Terra del Fuego, Jesuit fathers are now engaged in stock raising, and for two years or so a fine ranch has been established on the northern coast of Terra del Fuego, where there are today about 20,000 sheep and 6,000 cattle. The English have been the first to establish themselves in this territory. Stockraisers are now reaping a profit of 30 per cent. per annum. The explorers say the availability of the island for stock raising has been amply proven, and there is now no doubt that a prosperous future is before it.—Chicago Times.

Men Who Work After Dark.

Did it ever occur to you to be thankful that you don't have to drive a delivery team for a dry goods and millinery firm Saturday nights? One Saturday night Smith & Murray had over 200 bonnets to deliver after dark. It is bad enough to be waked up in the midst of one's first sound slumber which follows the consciousness that the labors of the week have been well performed to take in your wife's new bonnet, bill pinned on the back. But think of having to wear away the early morning hours of the Sabbath in trespassing about destroying the physical and mental, moral peace of the community in that way.

Still there are men that enjoy this sort of thing not only one night in the week, but seven: the Boston and Albany "callers," for instance. They go about all over the city and West Springfield thumping on the doors and windows of the men connected with the railroad freight service to tell them when it is time to get up and go to work, and if there is an accident on the road during the night the resident officials hear from them in a very pointed way. And these men grow fat in this sort of work—the continual disturbing of the peace of their fellow men, and build them happy homes on the proceeds of such labor.—Springfield Homestead.

A Victim of Circumstances.

"I might a' been rich onct," said the man with straw colored whiskers, "but circumstances was too much fer me."

"Tell us about it."

"Well, you see, it was like this way. I was workin' on a farm down here on the Wabash, when I meets a widder at a hoedown with a quarter section of 'bout as good land as you find outdoors. She sorter cottoned to me right on the jump. Went to see her three or four times, an' was gittin' thicker'n winter m'lasses, when I tuck the chills and fevers. Ever have 'em? Shake all the life out of you one day; next day you kin eat like a hawg. Well, I goes to see the widder on my well day, an' lo and behold, she had the chills. Next day I had 'em, next day she had 'em, next day I"

"Well?"

"Well, the upshot of the whole business was, that 'fore I could get rid o' them shakes a tramp preacher come along that was in the habit of having the shakes simultaneously with the widder, as it were, an' cut me clean out. I tell you, boys, when old Billy Circumstances has it in fer a man he kin jest as well give it up."—Indianapolis Journal.

The Unfreezable Rabbit.

A learned professor of the Paris Academie des Sciences has been making experiments which have resulted in convincing him that the rabbit is, of all living things, the most capable of withstanding a very low temperature. Inclosed all night in a block of ice, a rabbit was found next day getting on very comfortably and evidently not aware of anything very peculiar in his circumstances. In this regard the rabbit leaves far behind our faithful friend the dog, though, according to the learned professor, sheep, goats and pigs take good second, third and fourth places.—New York Telegram.

A Cat's Predicament.

A Center street merchant, while on his way home Monday evening, was a witness of a rather amusing incident. He discovered a quart milk can on the sidewalk bottom side up, and as he lifted it up a cat came with it, the poor animal having caught its head in the neck of the can. A vigorous shaking was necessary to release the cat from its imprisonment, when it darted across the street with a tail the size of a brush. It is supposed the cat found some milk in the can, and in its eagerness to get it got caught.—Rutland Herald.

Daily Consumption of Water in London.

London is said to require a daily supply of more than 150,000,000 gallons of water. Of this 15,000,000 gallons come from deep wells in the chalk, the rest from other sources, principally from the rivers Thames and Lea. The water from the chalk, though very free from organic impurities, is exceedingly hard, and, if not softened, costs the householder endless expense for cleaning boilers and obstructed pipes.—London Tit-Bits.

Wather Wough.

"Gwacious," cried Cholly suddenly at dinner, "there are thirteen people at table."

"Oh, no, Mr. Budd," whispered his fair companion, "only twelve people—and you."—Life.

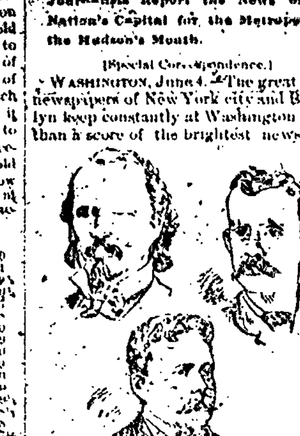

NEWS FOR BIG CITIES.

NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN'S WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENTS.

More Than a Score of Bright, Keen Journalists Report the News of the Nation's Capital for the Metropolis at the Hudson's Mouth.

[Special Correspondence.]

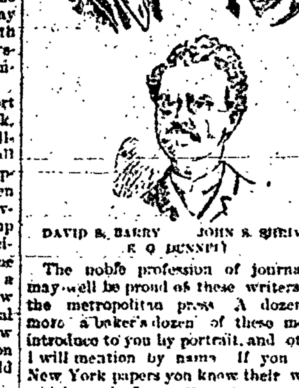

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The great daily newspapers of New York city and Brooklyn keep constantly at Washington more than a score of the brightest newsgatherers and writers in the world. These are the men through whose eyes and ears the vast metropolitan public estimated at 3,000,000 souls within fifteen miles of city hall, and a surrounding public of millions more—see and hear what is going on at the national capital. Conceive, if you can, the responsibility which this score of men assume in thus becoming the medium of intelligence between government, statesmen, politicians, public finances on the one hand, and one-tenth of the population of the country and one-fifth of the banking, commercial and railroad interests on the other.

J. W. ALLISON. C. A. HAMILTON. JULES GUTHRIDGE.

It is a responsibility, I am happy to say, which is honestly and loyally met. Journalists everywhere, and journalists at Washington especially, are as much public servants as senators, cabinet officers and members of the house. They draw their salaries and take their orders directly from their employers, the editors, but behind the editors are the people, and it is the people, after all, who are served, and whose favor must be won by the successful correspondent. No official servants of the people incur greater responsibility or have need of greater learning, zeal and integrity than these unofficial public servants of the press. If any newspaper men in the world have opportunities for indulgence in stock jobbing or other unworthy use of the power placed in their hands, it is these representatives of these great journals which are read in Wall street, in the center of trade, finance and transportation. Yet I have never heard of such a transgression on the part of a New York correspondent.

DAVID S. BARRY. JOHN S. SHRIVER. E. G. DUNNELL.

The noble profession of journalism may well be proud of these writers for the metropolitan press. A dozen or more—a baker's dozen—of these men I introduce to you by portrait, and others I will mention by name. If you read New York papers you know their work, which speaks for itself, and if you will closely scan the meager details of the training and experience these men have had which I am able to give within the limits of this letter, you will plainly see why they are worthy the power placed in their hands and how hard many of them have worked to reach the high level of Washington correspondent of a great metropolitan journal, which is near the top round of the ladder of journalism. All the world likes to hear of successful men and how they achieved success, and a pity 'tis I have not a column in which to tell you of the struggles and experiences of each one of these successful journalists, for every one of them, I assure you, has a life story worth your attention and mine.

Jules Guthridge, now in charge of the New York Herald bureau, has come up to this dignity in ten years. A country boy, like most of the Washington correspondents, he came here in 1883 as assistant on the Chicago Times' staff. Three years' service as correspondent of the Chicago News was followed by a connection with the New York Herald bureau, and a few months ago he was promoted to be chief of The Herald's staff. The Herald has always made a specialty of Washington news. It has always spent and continues to spend more money in procuring news here than any other paper. In the winter it has from four to six men in its service, and it pays the highest prices for news which any one may have to sell. Guthridge succeeds Nordhoff and Preston, two veteran correspondents, but he is in some respects the best man The Herald ever had here. Few men have more intimate friends among high officials than he.

Elbridge G. Dunnell, of The Times, is one of the best known correspondents in Washington. He has been a correspondent at Albany and here for nearly twenty years, and for ten years he has had charge of The Times bureau. He has traveled extensively, his specialty being politics. He knows a majority of the prominent men in the United States, and though more of a partisan than the average correspondent, he is universally respected for his ability and sincerity. His very capable assistant is Mr. F. A. Dupuy.

David S. Barry, of the New York Sun, was once a page in the Michigan legislature, and later in the United States senate. Ten years ago he joined The Sun staff here as a "cub." His ability and industry are attested by the fact that he has been promoted to be chief of staff on Mr. Dana's model newspaper.

M. G. Seckendorff, chief of The Tribune's bureau, is a high born and cultured German whose mastery of English is notable. He is one of the best and most trustworthy correspondents here, and has as assistants Major Clark, a veteran newsgatherer, and W. L. McPherson, the bright son of Clerk McPherson of the house of representatives.

W. L. Crounse, of The World, is one of the youngest of the prominent Washington correspondents, being only thirty. His father before him was a Washington correspondent, and a good one. His specialty is "exclusive," or sensational stories, such as The World's famous photographic interview with Senator Ingalls.

A brilliant writer on politics and everything else, now on The World staff, is James W. Allison, a Kentuckian, who looks like a poet, and who is one, too, if the truth were known. Quiet and elegant, Mr. Allison appears to know everything and everybody without making any fuss about it. I asked him the other day what he had done in the newspaper line, and his reply was so characteristic of the Washington correspondent that I quote him: "I have done a little something in every department of a newspaper—have thrown off the local squib, have made myself absolutely unintelligible in dramatic criticism, have interviewed a large number of the notables, and have ground out the profound political leader in the profuse sweat of my face. The value of all this God only knows."

Richard Lee Fearn, of the Brooklyn Eagle, is a southerner, as popular as he is capable. His first hit was in announcing several hours ahead of all rivals the apoplectic stroke that caused the death of Henry Ward Beecher.

A veteran journalist and stenographer is H. Conquest Clarke, of The Recorder. The son of a printer and editor in England, he became a printer and editor himself. Thirty years ago, during the war, his brilliant work on the New York Herald won him the desirable post of foreign editor. Later he was a member of the staff of the Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, and followed that luckless ruler in his campaigns. His work is marked by rare good judgment, and he has many friends in high places.

Another Englishman who has made a notable success here is Charles A. Hamilton, correspondent of the Brooklyn Times, Rochester Democrat, Buffalo Courier and Lincoln Journal. Other capable and well known correspondents, of whom much could be said did space permit, are John S. Shriver, of The Mail and Express, who recently acted as avant courier for the Presidential train; Jesse M. Sarvis, of the New York News; Major Thomas B. Kirby, of The Journal of Commerce, and Francis E. Leupp, of The Evening Post, all specialists in financial news; Paul Wolff, one of the best German newspaper men in America, of

L. J. LANG. PAUL WOLFF. THOMAS B. KIRBY.

The Staats-Zeitung, and Louis J. Lang, the exceptionally active and industrious representative of The Press.

WALTER WELLMAN.

Some Southerners in New York.

Dr. J. A. Wyeth, whose fame in the medical world is international, was a surgeon in the Confederate army. His residence at 257 Madison avenue ranks with the most artistic houses in the metropolis, and the mistress of the establishment reigns in her charming little kingdom with the most charming grace and dignity.

Exstein Norton, who recently retired from the presidency of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, has a beautiful suburban place in the prettiest part of Staten Island. The grounds surrounding his residence are among the most pretentious about New York, and in summer the place is a perfect paradise. Of the other southerners whose homes are noted are W. L. Trenholm, Andrew G. Dickinson, commander of the Confederate Camp of Veterans, and many others.

FINE HACKNEY HORSES.

THEY ARE SUCCESSFULLY BRED NOWADAYS

It Is Not Many Years Since This Has Been So—Mr. Burdett Coutts the First Breeder to Succeed in This Line. Pictures of Some Fine Examples.

[Special Correspondence.]

New York, June 1.—Before the era of good roads in England driving was too tedious and uncomfortable [illegible] of which a traveler could go wherever and as he wished on horseback. It became very desirable therefore that there should belong to every country gentleman a stout horse, at once capable of carrying a heavy weight, and active enough to get over the rough roads with as much speed as possible. The horses having these requirements were called hacks or hackneys, and they were most highly esteemed, and when first class brought prices almost as great as hunters. In this class at that time, a hundred years ago, were classed ponies, cobs, roadsters and Galloways. Indeed almost any stout horse which was neither a hunter nor a racehorse was called a hack. But the perfection of a hack was a horse between fourteen and fifteen hands high, with strong shoulders, short back, strong, flat legs, sloping pasterns and hard, sound feet. He was expected to walk five miles to the hour, trot twelve miles in the same time and, when called upon, gallop sixteen or eighteen miles in an hour with one carrying up his head.

This was what they used to think was a good hackney, and he was the general utility horse of every place, and fit for any kind of work except racing and hunting. The authorities of the olden time confess that the breeding of the hackney was a matter of chance, and that however perfect an individual horse or mare might be they could not be depended upon to reproduce their own admirable qualities in their progeny. But more recent breeders have been more successful, and they now have in

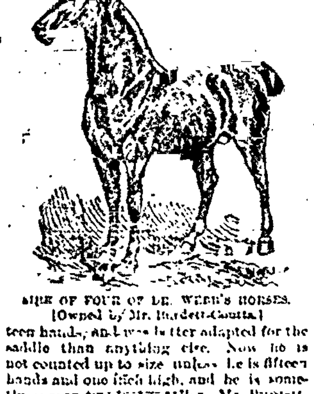

MR. CASSATT'S YOUNG WONDER.

England a class of horses called hackneys as distinct in their characteristics as the thoroughbred and American trotter, for instance, and which reproduce themselves with as much certainty as any other class.

To accomplish this required much study, many experiments and a vast outlay, and it has only been done with certainty very recently. The English love sport better than any other people in the world, and it is not wonderful, therefore, that breeding of thoroughbreds, or rather breeding from thoroughbreds, has been carried to an excess. The thoroughbred sire has been crossed and recrossed with all other kinds of horses, no matter how great the contrast between the classes mated. The consequences have at times been almost fatal to other useful classes of horses, and I recently read an official report in which it was said that some of the breeds, what from this practice and from importations into Germany, Holland and France, had almost become extinct. But for the intervention of specialty societies or clubs devoted to the interests of certain horses these English breeds might have entirely passed away in the old country. These clubs and the enterprising members of them have prevented this, and have, during the past few years, rather improved such useful horses.

Mr. Burdett Coutts, he who married the very rich baroness, has been most active in breeding hackneys, and the great improvement in these horses is by many conceded to have been brought about by his experiments. Formerly, as I have said, the hackney ranged in height from fourteen to fifteen hands, and was better adapted for the saddle than anything else. Now he is not counted up to size unless he is fifteen hands and one inch high, and he is sometimes even two inches taller. Mr. Burdett-Coutts says that fifteen hands two inches and one-half is the ideal height for a hackney.

SIRE OF FOUR OF DR. WEBB'S HORSES.

This horse is now rapidly becoming the fashion in America, and during the past few years there have been many importations of both stallions and mares. The principal importers have been Dr. William Seward Webb, the son in law of the late William H. Vanderbilt; Mr. A. J. Cassatt, of Philadelphia, and Mr. John A. Logan, Jr., of Youngstown, in Ohio. Three of the four horses whose pictures go along with this letter are from the respective stables of these gentlemen, while one is a picture of a stallion in the [illegible] Stud of Mr. Burdett Coutts, in England. They serve to give a very good idea of what a hackney should be.

The interest in this country in breeding the hackney has formulated itself in the formation of the American Hackney Horse society. The directors of this society are Mr. A. J. Cassatt, Mr. John R. Dutcher, Mr. Prescott Lawrence, Mr. John A. Logan, Jr., [illegible] Mr. Henry Fairfax, Mr. Pierre Lorillard, Jr., Mr. J. R. Perkins and Mr. Frederick Pillsbury. The object of the society is to improve the breed and promote the breeding of hackneys and ponies, to compile and publish a stud book of such horses, and to hold shows of such horses and to offer prizes for them. The stud book has been begun, but they have [illegible] many [illegible]. There were entries, however, of hackneys in the last national horse show, and Mr. Burdett Coutts, as preeminently the best authority in the world, came from England to serve as judge. [illegible] so many of his own breeding, and from strains of blood to which he was pub[illegible], that he declined to serve in [illegible] for which he had been selected. [illegible] was rather a pity, but the delicacy of his motives was highly appreciated.

All those excellent qualities which were so highly valued in the hackney of the olden time have been preserved. It is thought, in the modern horse, with the exception that he is now taller and probably has a higher knee action. Back, shoulders, legs and feet were what were formerly esteemed, and that is what is wanted now. "It is not the pace that kills," the old fashioned English groom is reported as saying, "but the 'ammer, 'ammer, 'ammer on the 'ard 'ighway." No saddle horse, no roadster, no general utility horse is good for anything without good feet. "No foot, no horse," is an old English adage. And so have the feet of horses been regarded in all times.

The hackney stallion [illegible] seems to me to be particularly adapted to mares [illegible] horses of the west. It might not be [illegible] that a [illegible] at once is produced, but I fancy that the first generation would be immensely improved, and that if the breeding were judiciously varied by using new stallions from time to time from among the different strains the [illegible] hardly and [illegible] [illegible] would be [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] for which [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] demonstrated that the hackney stallion [illegible] to a thoroughbred mare produces [illegible] for driving or riding. In breeding the other way, that is with a thoroughbred stallion and a hackney mare, the result is not so satisfactory.

JNO. GILMER SPEED.

World's Fair Gossip.

Chicago, June 2.—It is understood that Thomas A. Edison proposes to be represented at the World's fair by a new invention which will create a more decided sensation than anything he has yet given to the world, not even excepting the phonograph, is of international interest. Just what form it will take is a secret locked in his own breast, unless it be shared by his confidants in his laboratory. The very fact, however, that another great discovery will be given to the world at this time invests the event with additional importance, and will help to perpetuate its record upon history.

Edison does not talk much, but he does a mighty lot of thinking and just as much hard work, and when he told the directors the other day that he had been busy with his plans for his display at the fair for almost a year—in other words, that he had commenced almost simultaneously with the agitation in congress—a good many eyes opened wide, and a good many throats expressed admiration of his enterprise and the hustling characteristics of his methods. The wizard illustrates the old adage of "taking time by the forelock" just about as strongly as it is possible to illustrate it. Leading electricians, not only in this country, but also in the Old World, are now being consulted, and on the principle that in the multitude of counselors there is wisdom, the indications are that the two electrical branches of the exposition will be the most remarkable, as well as the most complete, of their kind that the world is likely to see in the present century.

The South Side parks, round about where the buildings will be located, present a very different appearance to what they did when the apology for a winter's snow had melted. The sites are now completely leveled for the buildings to be devoted to electricity, machinery, agriculture, fisheries and mines and mining, while the right of way is graded for the railroad of construction from the initial entrance to the grounds to the first structure of the row—the mining building. The labors of the landscape artist are also bringing forth good fruit, and for nearly a mile along the eastern shore the large wooded island is dotted with shrubbery and flowers, affording a very fair idea of how things will look under the summer sun of 1893. Some idea of the amount of preparatory work that has yet to be done can be gained from the fact that no less than eighteen miles of railroad track has to be laid purely for freight purposes.

The structure which is to be devoted to fish and fisheries will be just as unique as its contents. Those who have seen the plans say that they resemble a hump-backed banana, which is certainly something new in architectural design. The architect had no easy task of it, for he was compelled to subdivide the building into three parts, and to so adapt himself to circumstances that they might conform to the shape of the island. Instead of making the land to suit the building, the building had to fit the land, for the architect was assigned an ugly shaped area of ground, and told to design a structure to fit it. This is very much on the principle of the New York publisher who some years ago bought a few bushels of cats at auction, some of them, as I remember, being of lions, tigers, Arabs in native costume and young couples rowing about in boats, and assigned a well known journalist of that city to write stories for a Sunday school publication to fit the cuts. He performed his task a great deal better than many an artist who makes his picture to fit the story. And so Architect Cobb has made a more picturesque building [illegible] the ground than he might have done had he been given a free foot and all the land that he wanted.

The guests of the Mineral Springs hotel are enjoying the music of the new opera, which arrived yesterday from Denver.

Mr. F. J. Arkins, telegraph chief of the Denver News, his sister, Miss Grace Arkins, and Miss Clara Wilheim of Denver are at the Barker for a few days.

Mr. C. D. Hauk, president of the Peoples' Gas Light and Fuel company of Chicago, joined his family at the Cliff yesterday and will spend the season.

The meeting of the city council on last Monday evening was to determine the soliciting privileges of hackmen at the electric car stand. The hackmen are to be confined to 200 feet in front of the Rapid Transit depot, and are not to cross the dead line.

Mr. Warner's Lecture.

The lecture delivered last night in the First Methodist church by the Rev. Mr. Warner was very largely attended. The pews were crowded. Chairs filled the aisles, while many others were forced to stand. The lecture and the pictures thrown upon the canvas proved to be of great interest, and the discomfort of the crowded church was well worth enduring because of the great attractions on the canvas. After an interesting description of the Vesuvius and its crater, a large number of pictures descriptive of Pompeii and Herculaneum were displayed, and were accompanied by an attractive and minute description by the lecturer. One of the most interesting points in these pictures were the ruts worn in the pavement, by the chariot wheels of the old Romans which could be seen very distinctly in the well preserved streets. Pompeii is a spot where interest will never wear out, and whose descriptions are always interesting and attractive. Mr Warner is able to render the subject of double interest.

Something New.

The Seventh Day Adventists have pitched a commodious tent at the corner of Nevada avenue and Costilla street, in which they purpose to hold a series of religious meetings, beginning this Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock. The meetings will be conducted by Elder Smith Sharpe, who has resided in this city for nearly two years, and Elder E. W. Farnsworth of Des Moines, Iowa. These gentlemen represent the Seventh Day Adventists' denomination, and we presume that our citizens will take an opportunity to learn the Bible reasons why these people believe as they do. We are assured these meetings will be quiet, orderly gatherings. The tent is pleasantly situated and comfortably seated, with lamps to the seats. You are cordially invited to attend.

An Interesting Case.

Arguments in the case of [illegible] Campbell in [illegible] from Boulder county, were continued yesterday Judge Rogers opened the morning and Mr. Patterson the afternoon, and late in the day Judge Campbell took the case under advisement. The case involves property to the amount of $42,000, and is not in the nature of a suit, but comes up from the probate court of Boulder county on appeal in the settlement of the estate of John Leonard. The case [illegible] as far as 1824 and involves the legitimacy of Thomas Leonard. The heirs of John Leonard are Mary Church, a sister and the children of William and Thomas Leonard. The William Leonard heirs have always admitted the legality of the claim of Thomas Leonard's children, but Mary Church claims that [illegible] brother of John Leonard. It is claimed that the father of the Leonards came to America from Ireland about 1824 and married in New York state, that after the birth of John, William and Mary he deserted his wife and never returned. Four years after Thomas Leonard was born and Mary Church contends that the father and mother never lived together after the first separation, and that he must necessarily be illegitimate and that his children cannot inherit.

A Neighborly Neighborhood.

Mr. Goodheart (a suburban resident) Good morning!—What can I do for you this bright and beautiful spring morning?

First Neighbor—I noticed you hadn't begun making garden yet, so I thought I'd just step over and borrow your spade.

Mr. Goodheart—Certainly certainly. Here it is. Good day.

Second Neighbor—How do, Mr. Goodheart? Will you let me have your hoe for a few minutes?

Mr. Goodheart—Y-e-s. Certainly.

Third Neighbor Good morning. I see Mr. Spinks has your spade and Mr. Pinks just passed me with your hoe, and as you can't do anything with a rake without a spade and hoe to break the ground I concluded I might just as well drop in and borrow your rake. Thanks.

Fourth Neighbor I see you are not making any use of your wheelbarrow, and Mr. Goodheart—I will need the wheelbarrow the moment I begin making garden.

Neighbor Oh, yes, of course. But you can't make garden without a spade and hoe and rake, you know, and I'll rush back with the wheelbarrow quick as I see the spade coming back. Thanks.

Mr. Goodheart—Now don't forget that I shall need this wheelbarrow just as soon as Mr. Spinks comes back with my spade.

Fourth Neighbor Oh, I'll have plenty of time to get through with the barrow. Spinks told me he'd be busy with your spade for a month.—New York Weekly.

No Risks Refused.

"Are you the agent for the Sandusky dollar Accident Insurance company?"

"Yes, sir."

"I want a policy for $50,000."

"All right. Cost you $1.75 a What is your business, sir?"

"I am leading man in a theatrical company."

"All right. It will be $1.75 a— But hold on! What kind of a play is it?"

"The realistic comedy drama."

"Tank or buzz saw?"

"Buzz saw."

"Double extra hazardous class. Twenty-five dollars a minute. No? Well, good day." Chicago Tribune.

Came Prepared.

The Liars' club had met at the usual time and place, the competitors for the honor of having told the prize lie of the evening had spun their yarns, and the committee was about to retire for consultation.

"Gentlemen," observed the chairman, "it may lighten your labors if you take a smoke. Try these cigars. You will find them pretty fair."

The committee smoked the cigars and unanimously awarded the prize to the chairman.—Chicago Tribune.

Two Airs Boys.

Little Dick—Mamma, I'm awful sick. Mayn't I stay home from school?

Mamma—Certainly. Lie down on the sofa.

Little Dick (by the window half an hour later)—Mamma, may I go out and play hopscotch with Billy Bunce? He isn't at school to-day.

Mamma—You are sick.

Little Dick—So is Billy.—Good News.

Love Casts a Spell.

Minerva (just engaged)—I used to [illegible] language, but since I have known and comprehended my dear Leander it seems to me that his couplet,

In May when the oyster is not fit
Give me the clam in place of it, is not at all bad, and is really fraught with a cheerful philosophy which I deem not unpleasing. New York Herald.

G. A. R.—ATTENTION!

It is a long time yet before you will have your knapsacks packed for the great encampment to be held at Detroit, Mich., but some of you are even now inquiring as to the best route.

If you will ask any ticket agent or hotel clerk for a folder containing a map of the Great Wabash route and will examine that map, you will see that this line offers inducements unequalled. For instance you will see that the Wabash can take you from either Kansas City or Council Bluffs, by way of St. Louis and Chicago, or Toledo, or via the direct air line straight to Detroit without change of cars.

The hearing in the case of Lee Dolson was continued in Justice Walker's court yesterday afternoon in order that the testimony of Drs. Strickler, Marlow and Oglebee might be taken. Dr. Marlow did not testify, but the two other witnesses were put upon the stand and testified that the blow Crowe received from Dolson's pincers in the blacksmith shop was the probable cause of death. Dolson's bail was reduced from $3,000 to $1,000, and he was held to await action by the grand jury.

Meeting our hotel man, Philip Crawshaw at Colorado Springs last Sunday on his way to Pueblo, he gave us a bit of history in reference to the early settlement of that city and pointed out four corner lots right in the business portion of the town, on which he was offered an option twenty years ago at $20 each. He offered the owners two old mules and a lame bronco for the whole outfit and failed to make the deal. This property could not be bought to-day for $1000 a foot.—[Douglas County News.

Prof. L. C. Blakeslee, the gentleman who so kindly gives away the fans each year for the smooth, quick passage Burlington line to the east, and incidentally works up a little passenger business on the side, was in the city yesterday. The announcement that the professor had signed with an Uncle Tom's Cabin company for next year was a little premature, but the gentleman is willing to vouch for the GAZETTE as a good advertising medium, as there were about 1,800 applications for his job with the Burlington after the appearance of the item.

Bardsley Pleads Guilty.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—John Bardsley, city treasurer of Philadelphia, was brought up from Moyamensing prison this morning, and arraigned in the court of quarter sessions before Judges Fell and Wilson, on seventeen different indictments, charging him with loaning money as a public officer, and converting public money to his own use. When Bardsley was asked how he plead, he plead guilty to every count in the indictment. District Attorney Graham addressed the court and stated that in view of Bardsley's plea and the fact that his counsel has not had time to examine the bills of indictment, he would not press for sentence being pronounced at once. It was then arranged that this day two weeks should be set for hearing the evidence for and against Bardsley, and the court would then weigh it and pronounce sentence. In the seventeen indictments on which Bardsley plead guilty, the total amount of money involved is $945,000.

While arguing for the two weeks delay counsel for Bardsley said: "I am preparing a statement for Mr. Bardsley and it will take me all of that time to get it ready." This caused a sensation and opened a new rumor that the city treasurer intends to make a clean breast of everything.

AN EDUCATIONAL CAPITAL.

BOISE CITY, Idaho, June 9, 1891.

The High schools of this city graduated a class of young people to-day, and the splendid proof of careful intellectual training exhibited marks another upward step in the progress of this city as an educational capital. No public school in the northwest ranks higher. The graduating class is intellectually prepared for ordinary teaching and for the average occupations of life. People considering the question of locating at the capital of Idaho need not fear that they are invited to a rude border town. They will find here an academy, commercial college, public and private schools, literary societies and libraries equal to any town of its size in the Union, and [illegible] the exceeding nine-tenths of them. Along with all the activities of a financial and commercial centre, the social and intellectual advantages of the place are all that can be desired.
